Trend to watch: “Last year’s attacks on landscape architects and geologists is the start of a nationwide trend. Due to a lack of understanding of what our industry provides for the built environment, some of our legislators are touting that professional licensure is an impediment to employment and that we are an over-regulated industry. A departure from licensure for professional engineering and architecture could open doors to poorly qualified and/or unethical persons practicing in Arizona, with no consequence other than increased risk to public health and safety.”
